Note Photoshop is covered in much more detail in Chapter 11. Figure 1-3. The first tool in Photoshop is the Pencil Tool, which lets you draw freehand lines and shapes. Figure 1-4. The Eraser tools allow you to erase only what you want in an image. You can use this tool to correct fuzzy images, but you'll quickly discover it's better to use the Spot Healing Brush. # Smart Objects and Other Features Many of Photoshop's tools enable you to work with a _Smart Object_. Smart Objects are special layers that retain the appearance of pixels in an image. A Smart Object layer does not just add or remove pixels. It's a blend of pixels—you _see_ the pixels in the original image, even though they no longer physically exist. Smart Objects make image editing easier and faster. You can scale, edit, combine, and even create and delete entire groups of Smart Objects.

What's New In?

1) Field of the Invention This invention relates generally to particle detectors, and more specifically to a novel particle detector in which the electrical pulses caused by an interaction of a particle with the detector are utilized to provide an indication of the type of particle being detected. In one aspect, the invention relates to a particle detector in which the pulses associated with a given particle are utilized to provide a qualitative result, i.e. a qualitative indication of the size and/or mass of the particles, in another aspect of the invention, the pulses provide a quantitative result, i.e. a quantitative indication of the size and/or mass of the particles. 2) Description of Related Art There are a number of types of particle detectors that are available commercially and known in the prior art. These include, for example, the avalanche photodiode detectors, the phosphor detectors, the MCA detectors, the ion chambers, and the number of thinned, semi-conductor detectors such as the SCINT 2.8 detector which is described in the brochure entitled "SCINT 2.8" from the Radiation & Electron Physics Division of the EID, Rev. 0, 1987. The SCINT 2.8 detector utilizes a semi-conductor detector, in the form of a thin layer of semi-conductor material, in conjunction with a DPD sensor. The DPD sensor, as described in U.S. Pat. No. 5,077,778 to Goffe and in U.S. Pat. No. 5,327,126 to Hirose et al., is an integrated circuit which responds to energy deposited in the thin layer of semi-conductor material to generate an output pulse which can be used to determine the kinetic energy of the interacting particle. The SCINT 2.8 detector was originally developed as a neutron detector. When a neutron strikes the thin layer of semi-conductor material of the SCINT 2.8 detector, a number of electrons are released as a result of the nuclear reaction of the neutrons with the semi-conductor material. These electrons are accelerated across the semi-conductor material and are captured by ionized atoms in the semi-conductor material. As a result, the electron/ion pairs are produced in the semi-conductor material. This subsequent multiplication of the electrons results in the production of an electrical pulse signal in the output device of the detector. The SCINT 2.8 detector is a photosensitive detector which is a type of pulse
